ARBITRARY SIGNS USED IN WRITING AND PRINTING.

I. ASTRONOMICAL.

1. SUN, GREATER PLANETS, ETC.

☉, or ⊙ The Sun.
☽, ☽, or ☾ The Moon.
● New Moon.
◑, or ☽ First Quarter.
○, or ⊙ Full Moon.
◐, or ☾ Last Quarter.
☿ Mercury.
♀ Venus.
⊕, ⊖, or ♁ The Earth.
♂ Mars.
♃ Jupiter.
♄ Saturn.
♅, or ♁ Uranus.
♆ Neptune.
☄ Comet.
*, or ✳ Fixed Star.

The asteroids are now designated by numbers indicating the order of their discovery, and their symbol is a small circle inclosing this number; as, ①, Ceres; ②, Pallas; ③, Juno; ④, Vesta, etc.

2. SIGNS OF THE ZODIAC.

Spring Signs.	1.	♈	Aries, the Ram.
	2.	♉	Taurus, the Bull.
	3.	♊	Gemini, the Twins.
Summer Signs.	4.	♋	Cancer, the Crab.
	5.	♌	Leo, the Lion.
	6.	♍	Virgo, the Virgin.
Autumn Signs.	7.	♎	Libra, the Balance.
	8.	♏	Scorpio, the Scorpion.
	9.	♐	Sagittarius, the Archer.
Winter Signs.	10.	♑	Capricornus, the Goat.
	11.	♒	Aquarius, the Waterman.
	12.	♓	Pisces, the Fishes.

3. ASPECTS AND NODES.

☌ Conjunction; — indicating that the bodies have the same longitude, or right ascension.
* Sextile; — indicating a difference of 60° in longitude, or right ascension.
□ Quadrature; — indicating a difference of 90° in longitude, or right ascension.
△ Trine; — indicating a difference of 120° in longitude, or right ascension.
☍ Opposition; — indicating a difference of 180° in longitude, or right ascension.
☊ Ascending Node; — called also Dragon's Head.
☋ Descending Node; — called also Dragon's Tail.

II. CHEMICAL.

• One equivalent of oxygen; — written above a symbol representing an element, and repeated to indicate two, three, or more equivalents; thus, Ḟe denotes a compound of one equivalent of oxygen with one of iron; S̈ a compound of three equivalents of oxygen with one of sulphur.

, One equivalent of sulphur; — used in the same manner as the preceding; thus, F̋e denotes a compound of two equivalents of sulphur and one of iron.

☞ A dash drawn across a symbol having either of the foregoing signs above it denotes that two equivalents of the substance represented by the symbol are joined with the number of equivalents of oxygen or sulphur indicated by the dots or commas; thus, F̈e represents a compound of two equivalents of iron and three of oxygen, forming sesqui-oxide of iron.

+ indicates in organic chemistry, a base or alkaloid, when placed above the initial letter of the name of the substance; as, $\dot{M}$, morphine; $\dot{Q}$, quinine.

— indicates, in organic chemistry, an acid, when placed above the initial letter of the name of the acid; as, $\bar{C}$, citric acid; $\bar{T}$, tartaric acid.

☞ Every elementary substance is represented, in chemical notation, by a symbol consisting of the initial or abbreviation of its Latin name; as, H for hydrogen, O for oxygen, Ag (from Argentum) for silver, and the like, each symbol, when used singly, always indicating a single atom or equivalent of the substance represented by it; thus, O stands for one atom or equivalent of oxygen, C for a single equivalent of carbon, and the others in like manner. A compound body made up of single equivalents of its constituents is represented by the two symbols of the respective constituents written side by side; as, HO, a compound of one equivalent of hydrogen with one of oxygen, forming water. To express more than one atom or equivalent of a substance, a number is used, either prefixed to the symbol, or, more commonly, written after it, below the line; as 2O, or O_2, two equivalents of oxygen.

A secondary compound, as a salt, is indicated by writing the symbols of the constituent compounds one after another, with the sign + between them, the symbol of the base being always placed first; thus, CaO + CO_2 represents carbonate of lime. A comma is frequently used instead of the sign +, commonly to express a more intimate union than would be expressed by that sign. The period is also sometimes used to indicate a union more intimate than that denoted by the sign +, but less so than that implied by a comma. A number written before the symbol of a compound designates a corresponding number of equivalents of that compound; as, 3 SO_3, three equivalents of sulphuric acid. When the formula of the quantity contains several terms, those to which the figure applies are included in parentheses or brackets, to which the figure is prefixed; as, 3(CaO + SO_3), three equivalents of sulphate of lime.

III. MATHEMATICAL.

THE RELATIONS OF QUANTITIES.

\+ Plus; and; more; — indicating addition; as $a + b = c$; — used also to indicate that figures have been omitted from the end of a number, or that the latter is approximately exact; as, the square root of 2 is 1.4142136+.

— Minus; less; — indicating subtraction; as $a - b = c$.

±, or ∓ Plus or minus; ambiguous; — indicating that the number or quantity to which it is prefixed may have either of the signs + or —; as, $a \pm b$.

× Multiplied by; times; into; as, $a \times b = ab$; $6 \times 4 = 24$.

☞ Multiplication is also often indicated by placing a dot between the factors, or by writing the latter, when not numerals, one after another without any sign.

÷ or : Divided by; as, $a \div b$; that is, a divided by b; $6 \div 3 = 2$.

☞ Division is also very often indicated by writing the divisor under the dividend, with a line between them; as $\frac{a}{b}$; that is, a divided by b; $\frac{3}{6} = 2$.

= Is equal to; equals; as $(a + b) \times c = ac + bc$; $6 + 2 = 8$.

> Is greater than; as, $a > b$; that is, a is greater than b; $6 > 5$.

< Is less than; as, $a < b$; that is, a is less than b; $3 < 4$.

=○= Is equivalent to; — applied to magnitudes or quantities which are equal in area or volume, but are not of the same form, or capable of superposition.

~ The difference between; — used to indicate the difference between two quantities without designating which is the greater; as, $a \sim b$.

∝ Varies as; is proportional to; as, $a \propto b$.

: Is to; the ratio of; } — used to indicate geo-

:: As; equals; } metrical proportion; as, $a : b :: c : d$; that is, a is to b as c is to d.

∴ Hence; therefore; on this account.

∵ Because.

∞ Indefinitely great; infinite; infinity.

0 Indefinitely small; infinitesimal; — used to denote a quantity less than any assignable quantity; also, as a numeral, naught; nothing; zero.

∠ Angle; the angle; as, ∠ A B C.

∟ Right angle; the right angle; as, ∟ A B C; that is, the right angle A B C.

⊥ The perpendicular; perpendicular to; as, draw A B ⊥ C D.

|| Parallel; parallel to; is parallel to; as, A B || CD.

○ Circle; circumference; 360°.

△ Triangle; the triangle; as, △ A B C; that is, the triangle A B C.

□ Square; the square; as, □ A B C D; that is, the square A B C D.

▭ Rectangle; the rectangle; as, ▭ A B C D; that is, the rectangle A B C D.

$\surd$, or $\sqrt{\ }$ Root; — indicating, when used without a figure placed above it, the square root; as, $\surd 4 = 2$; $\surd 4a^2 = 2a$. This symbol is called the radical sign. To denote any other than the square root, a figure (called the index) expressing the degree of the required root, is placed above the sign; as, $\sqrt[3]{a}$, $\sqrt[5]{a}$, $\sqrt[10]{a}$, etc.: that is, the cube root, 6th root, 10th root of a.

☞ The root of a quantity is also denoted by a fractional index at the right hand side of the quantity and above it, the denominator of the index expressing the degree of the root; as $a^{\frac{1}{2}}$, $a^{\frac{1}{3}}$, $a^{\frac{1}{5}}$; that is, the square, cube, and fifth roots of a, respectively.

——— Vinculum,
( ) Parenthesis,
[ ], or { }, Brackets,
| Bar,
} indicate that the quantities to which they are applied, or which are inclosed by them, are to be taken together; as, $\overline{x + y^2}$; $2(a + b)$; $a \times (b + c[e + d])$; $+\frac{x}{y}|z$.

f, or F Function; function of; as $y = f(x)$; that is, y is, or equals, a function of x.

☞ Various other letters or signs are frequently used by mathematicians to indicate functions; as, f, ϕ, ϕ', ψ, π, and the like.

d Differential; as, dx; that is, the differential of x.

δ Variation; as δx; that is, the variation of x.

△ Finite difference.

D Differential coefficient; derivative.

☞ The letters d, δ, △, D, and sometimes others, are variously employed by different mathematicians, prefixed to quantities to denote that the differentials, variations, finite differences, or differential coefficients of these quantities are to be taken; but the ordinary significations are those given above.

$\int$ Integral; integral of; — indicating that the expression before which it is placed is to be integrated; as, $\int 2x dx = x^2$; that is, the integral of $2xdx$ is x^2.

☞ It is repeated to indicate that the operation of integration is to be performed twice, or three or more times, as $\int\int$, $\int\int\int$, etc. For a number of times greater than three, an index is commonly written at the right hand above; as, $\int^m x dx^m$; that is, the mth integral, or the result of m integrations of xdx^m.

$\int_b^a$ denotes that the integral is to be taken between the value b of the variable and its value a. $\int^a$ denotes that the integral ends at the value a of the variable, and $\int_b$ that it begins at the value b. These forms must not be confounded with the similar one indicating repeated integration, or with that indicating the integral with respect to a particular variable.

Σ Sum; algebraic sum; — commonly used to indicate the sum or summation of finite differences, and in nearly the same manner as the symbol $\int$.

ϵ Residual.

π The number 3.14159265 +; the ratio of the circumference of a circle to its diameter, of a semicircle to its radius, and of the area of a circle to the square of its radius. In a circle whose radius is unity, it is equal to the semi-circumference, and hence is used to designate an arc of 180°.

° Degree or Degrees; as, 60°; that is, sixty degrees (of temperature or of an arc or circle).

′ Minutes of arc; as, 30′; that is, thirty minutes.

″ Seconds of arc; as, 20″; that is, twenty seconds.

′, ″, ‴, etc. Accents used to mark quantities of the same kind which are to be distinguished; as, a', a'', a''', etc., which are usually read a prime, a second, a third, etc.; $a\ b'$, $c'' + a'\ b''\ c + a'''\ b\ c'$. Also used to designate feet, inches, and lines, as, 3′ 6″ 2‴.

¹, ², ³, etc. Indices placed above and at the right hand of quantities to denote that they are raised to powers whose degree is indicated by the figure; as, a^1, that is, the first power of a; a^2, the square or second power of a; a^3, the cube or third power of a; and the like.

THE CROWNING OF PETRARCH.

Nothing can be conceived more affecting or noble than that ceremony. The superb palaces and ~~and~~ porticos by which had rolled the ivory chariots of Marius and Caesar had long mouldered into dust. The laureled fasces, the golden eagles, the shouting Legions, the captives, and the [pictured cities were indeed wanting to his victorious pro cession The sceptre had passed away from Rome. But she still retained the influence mightier of an intellectual empire, and was now to confer the ~~prouder~~ reward of an intellectual triumph. To the man who had extended the dominion of her ancient language — who had erected the trophies of philosophy and ____ imagination in the haunts of ignorance and ferocity, whose ~~captions~~ were the hearts of admiring nations enchained by the influence of his song — whose spoils were the treasures of ancient genius — the Eternal City offered the glorious and just tribute of her gratitude.

Amid the ruined monuments of ancient, and the infant erections of modern art, he who had restored the broken link between the two ages of human civilization was crowned with the wreath which he had deserved from the moderns who owed to him their refinement, — from the ancients who owed to him their fame

Never was a coronation so august witnessed by westminster or Rheims.

METRIC SYSTEM OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

SCALE, $\frac{1}{20}$ of the Exact Size.

N. B. The edges of this cube are each 1 Meter, or 10 Decimeters, or 100 Centimeters, in length.

1 sq. Centimeter, Exact Size.

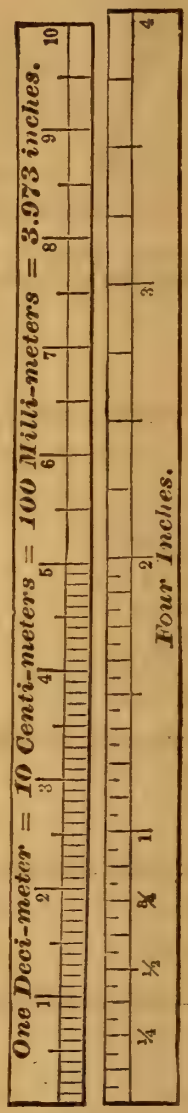
Dry Milliliter.

Liquid Milliliter.



In the Metric System, the Meter is the base of all the weights and measures employed.

The Meter was intended to be, and is very nearly, one ten millionth part of the distance measured on a meridian of the earth from the equator to the pole, and is about 39.37 inches.

The Meter is the primary unit of length.

Upon the Meter are based the following primary units: the Square Meter, the Are, the Cubic Meter or Stere, the Liter, and the Gram.

The Square Meter is the unit of measure for small surfaces; as the surface of a floor, table, etc.

The Are is the unit of land measure; this is a square whose side is 10 meters in length, and which contains 100 square meters.

The Cubic Meter, or Stere, is the unit of volume; this is a cube whose edge is 1 meter in length.

The Liter is the unit of capacity; this is the capacity of a cube whose edge is 1-10th of a meter in length.

The Gram is the unit of weight; this is the weight of distilled water contained in a cube whose edge is the 100th part of a meter.

From these primary units the higher and lower orders of units are derived decimally.
